

Submitter Institution: Loyola Marymount University

Submitter Phone: 310-338-5728

Loyola
Marymount University

Department: African American Studies department

Position Title: Assistant Professor

Qualifications: • Ph.D. in African American Studies with a specialization in social scientific research including quantitative techniques. The department will consider applicants with backgrounds in other appropriate social science fields whose work centers the black experience, including but not limited to Sociology, Political Science, Anthropology, Public Policy, and Public Health. A Ph.D. is required by the time of appointment. • Success in teaching the African American experience. • Record of scholarly achievement in the discipline of African American Studies. • Ability to incorporate LMU's mission in teaching, scholarship, and service to the university.

Application Procedures: Applicants should submit a complete dossier via the LMU Human Resources online application portal : (<http://jobs.lmu.edu>), including 1) a cover letter (outlining area of expertise, teaching and research interests); 2) a curriculum vita; 3) a statement of teaching philosophy that demonstrates the candidate's approach to teaching African American Studies; 4) a sample syllabus of Introduction to African American Studies or African American Research Methods; 5) a writing sample (no more than 30 pages in length); 6) A copy (can be unofficial) of graduate school transcripts. The three letters of recommendation should be scanned, signed by the recommenders, and emailed by the recommender either directly or via Interfolio to Stefan Bradley: AFAMFacultySearch@lmu.edu. Please direct questions to Stefan Bradley at the above address. Only electronic applications will be considered. The deadline for applications and recommendations is November 1, 2019.

Other Information: The successful candidate should have expertise in 20th and 21st century African American political and social issues and experience with multi-method approaches. The Department is particularly interested in candidates with innovative research designs that interrogate the relationship between race and other relevant social indicators.

Application November 1, 2019
Deadline: