Position Title: Assistant or Associate Professor in African American Studies & Artificial Intelligence

Institution is Seeking: The African American Studies Program at the University of Florida, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, invites applications for four full-time, tenure track, nine-month appointment, at the Assistant or Associate level and one position in Artificial Intelligence/Critical Race and Digital Studies, at the Assistant Professor level, in African American Studies as part of a nationally-focused cluster hire, to begin August 16, 2021. The five new faculty members will play a central role in moving the current program in African American Studies towards departmental status. We are, therefore, seeking candidates who have experience in curriculum and departmental development. The African American Studies Program seeks to hire faculty broadly engaged in research that is field-bridging, and which will add to our program's intellectual diversity, as well as better reflect the interests of our undergraduate students. While the field is open, preference will be given to scholars with research and teaching expertise in the following areas: Economics of Racial Inequality, Health Disparities, Carceral Studies, and Black Cultural Studies (sport or music). The program strives to provide innovative, compelling, and strategic research and teaching to both academic audiences as well as the local and national community. Core strategic priorities include: Research that examines the African American experience in a transnational context from a broad base of disciplinary theories; Community-based outreach and learning; and Teaching and skills development that introduces students from all disciplinary areas to African American intellectual history, critical theory, and professional development. Successful applicants are expected to teach two courses per fall and two courses per spring semester, with a mix of introductory and advanced undergraduate courses. The ability to develop experiential learning opportunities for undergraduates and excel in mentoring undergraduate research and experience in developing a department. Salary is competitive and commensurate with qualifications and experience, and includes a full benefits package.
