Position Title: Assistant Professor

Institution is Seeking: The University of Alabama Honors College invites applications for a full-time faculty positions at the rank of assistant professor to begin in August, 2023. This is a 9-month, non-tenure earning, three-year renewable position, with renewal contingent on performance, need, and funding. Successful candidate will be expected to teach honors classes, including seminar classes, and engage in service/academic citizenship appropriate to the scholarship of honors education.

Qualifications: Minimum qualifications include (1) an earned doctorate or other terminal degree appropriate to their discipline and (2) teaching experience at the college-university level. Preference will be given to applicants with experience related to critical and creative thinking, ethics and empathy, collaboration and inclusive leadership, and/or experiential learning. Applicants must demonstrate expertise and interest in transdisciplinary education and an eagerness to engage a diverse student body. Successful candidates must have the ability and desire to teach honors courses, including seminar courses. They should be able to build creative, transdisciplinary syllabi, foster dialog among students, and help individual students hone their skills as critical and creative thinkers, ethical and empathetic citizens, and collaborative and inclusive leaders. Honors faculty are expected to have skills and techniques necessary to manage highly collaborative, inclusive, student-centered, and ideologically diverse conversations both in and out of the classroom. This is a central aspect to honors seminar courses, which also invites students to put critical and creative thinking, ethics and empathy, and collaboration and inclusivity into their own values, behaviors, and motivations.

Application Procedures: Please include a teaching statement that addresses how transdisciplinarity and DEI are approached within the classroom. A sample syllabi from a class you have designed or would like to design is also required and should be uploaded under the class schedule option. Note only a list of three references are needed, names and contact information only. Apply at:
