Submitter Phone: 212-999-9222

Department: Department of Social and Cultural Analysis

Position Title: Assistant Professor in Black Cultural Studies

Institution is Seeking: The Department of Social and Cultural Analysis at New York University invites applications for a tenure-track, assistant professor position in Black Cultural Studies. We are particularly interested in applicants whose work focuses on the Caribbean or the African continent and its diasporas, and whose research and teaching take an interdisciplinary and comparative approach.

Qualifications: This position is part of a multi-departmental cluster hire in “Black Diaspora Cultural Studies,” which includes the Arts and Science departments of Art History, History and Music. A primary aim of the cluster is to create a network for scholars at NYU working across a range of disciplines. More information about this cluster can be found here, along with background on NYU's broader Faculty Cluster Hiring Initiative.
