The Department of African American Studies seeks a dedicated teacher-scholar with demonstrated teaching excellence. The position begins on August 15, 2024, and has a six-course teaching load (3-3). We are particularly interested in scholars who have a foundational background in African American Studies. Successful candidates will teach “Introduction to African American Studies” or “Race in Contemporary Society,” along with Upper Division courses that center on the African American experience in their field of expertise.

Candidates should submit application materials via the LMU Human Resources online application portal. To apply, please send:

1) a letter of application (outlining area of expertise, teaching and research interests, and resonance with LMU’s mission);
2) a curriculum vitae;
3) a statement of teaching philosophy that demonstrates your approach to teaching in the liberal arts tradition;
4) teaching evaluations and/or sample syllabi;
5) if available, a writing sample; and at least two letters of recommendation.

The online portal only accepts 5 documents; please submit any documents that exceed this limit directly to the department chair, Marne Campbell marne.campbell@lmu.edu.

Only online applications will be accepted. We will begin our review of applications on July 1, 2024, and will consider applications until the position is filled. A PhD in African American Studies or relevant field is required; however, applicants with MA’s, MFA’s or who are ABD who demonstrate substantial teaching experience will be considered.

Faculty Regular

Reasonable expected salary: $72,000.00

Loyola Marymount University, a Carnegie classified R2 institution in the mainstream of American Catholic higher education, seeks outstanding applicants who value its mission and share its commitment to inclusive excellence, the education of the whole person, and the building of a just society. LMU is an equal opportunity employer committed to providing an environment free from discrimination and harassment as defined by federal, state and local law. We invite all persons in the full diversity of their being, life experience, and beliefs to apply. (Visit www.lmu.edu for more information.)